Quotes for Today

The follies which a man regrets most in his life are those which he didn't commit when he had the opportunity. - Helen Rowland

To keep the heart unwrinkled, to be hopeful, kindly, cheerful, and reverent - that is to triumph over old age. - Thomas Bailey Aldrich

Got All the Facts?

Perhaps you saw the alarming video taken by a security camera outside a Target store in Stafford, VA last week. Three adults are seen grabbing a young lady and pushing her forcefully into the open door of a waiting van. From all appearances, it was a dramatic daylight kidnapping! – As it turns out, the three were family members of the 17 year-old girl who was pitching a snit by refusing to get in the car because she didn't want to make the move to Sarasota, FL.

Gee, good thing a concern passerby didn't start throwing punches at that family. Things sure look different once you get all the facts. And yet, you and I react to most situations and people around us based on a partial grasp of the facts. The older you get, the more times you see how something you thought was true got overturned by the discovery of more information proving that belief to be completely wrong. Or else you learn something significant about a person which goes miles to explain why he acts the way he does.

A presidential candidate will often campaign on promises to take specific action if elected; but when he gets into office and receives mountains of intelligence briefings which are unknown to the public, he says, "Whoa! I can't do what I thought I should." And he changes his mind.

Only God knows it all. You and I grasp only the partial. Be open, be flexible, be inquisitive. "What else should I know that would help me understand?" It's usually a very good question to ask.

Yours in Him,

Lee
