Quotes for Today

It is your prime responsibility to acquire useful knowledge from others and to apply it appropriately. You don't have to reinvent the wheel, but you do have to learn from those who did. - Gary Ryan Blair

In one or two minutes of time we have the opportunity to define ourselves as human beings. There isn't much room for error. - V.J. Smith

From the Pastor

The Unseen and Unknown

In the latest issue of Discover magazine, Valerie Ross summarizes a few significant gaps in what mankind knows of the cosmos and reality. For instance...

- 96% of the universe consists of unknown components: 23% is thought to be dark matter, detectable only by its gravitational pull on other material, and 73% (we are still guessing) is dark energy. Only 4% of the cosmos is the ordinary matter of atoms which compose familiar objects such as galaxies, stars, planets, and the objects of every day life.
- The function of about half of the total estimated number of human protein-encoding genes (or 12,500) is unknown.
- There are estimated to be at least 5 million undescribed species on the planet. Only 1.9 million species have been given scientific names, and today's species are thought to represent less than 1% of all animals and plants that have ever lived!
- An estimated 85 billion cells in the human brain are not neurons, and we can only speculate as to what functions these glia and myelin cells serve.

In short, there is still a heck of a lot mankind does not know! – So when a brilliant scientist such as Stephen Hawking asserts in his new book that there is no need for a Supreme Being or God for the observable universe to exist... uh, a little humility is in order. Since God by definition cannot be seen, weighed, measured, or quantified, how can one assert that God does not exist? On the other hand, no one can prove that a Creator-God does exist. So the musing of Stephen Hawking, bless his heart, is not a fact of science but merely a metaphysical belief... and a mistaken one at that.

I'll go with Paul because he held to a wider view when he wrote: So we fix our eyes not on what is seen but what is unseen. For what is unseen is temporary, but what is unseen is eternal. – 2 Corinthians 4:18.

When scientists tell us how much of our universe is unseen, I actually find Paul's assertion even easier to believe. Don't you?

Yours in Him,

Lee
